The 3 vols. have no serial number: the 1-p. of the second differs from that of the first in the date, is the manuscript "Christianissimo", and in the motto above the device (a misreading of "Virtute de Rebusque" which reads "Virtute de Rebusque") on the 1-p. of the first. Both have the Gryphus device (Hendriker no. 4) on the last page, the 3d v. with a different set of mottoes, and with the letters A. M. P. added below the colophon (dated 1588).

"Ejemplar número 115 ..."
"Con este título se indica que el código no puede decirse que se refiere originariamente a la dicha ciudad, porque, salvo el encabezamiento ... y el final ... el cuerpo del código parece convenir con el fuero romancado de Teruel, del cual podría ser una de las copias primitivas y la forma en que fue concedido como carta a la villa de Castiel. El nombre de Castiel, en efecto, es el que se ve originariamente escrito en varios lugares del código; y el que se advierte en todos los demás pasajes en los que se lee sobre rasgado o interlineado el nombre de Albarracín, y algunas veces el de Teruel."—Estado preliminar.

Since the scope of this present work had stretched beyond the space, which could be allotted to the packet lines in my forthcoming more general study of New York port, 1815-1860, it has seemed best to bring out this special study first."

308 p. illus. 124.
The letter A, occurring on some of the woodcuts, has occasioned different readings: cf. H. Green, Andrea Aliciati and his books of emblems, London, 1872, p. 45-47; G. R. Nagler, Monogrammatum, Munich, 1858, v. 1, p. 25, no. 53, assumes that the letter refers to the draughtsman of the cuts, and even mentions Aliciati himself as the possible artist.

Reprint of the edition of 1701? The first edition of L'Estrange's translation appeared in 1678 and was reprinted in 1693.

The original letters, probably written in Portuguese, and known as "Letras portugaises" are lost. The name of the author, rediscovered by Bonaventura in 1810, does not appear in the older editions. The names of the addressees, "Marquês de Chamilly," and of the translator, "Villiers," are also missing. The letters, as they appeared in the preface to the edition leaving imprint Cologne, P. du Maréchal, 1702, and in some of the later editions. (cf. note under entry for ed. of 1902)

The second edition revised and with introduction brought up to date—quoting the French text and the English version of 1715—came out in 1897 (London, D. Nutt) and is, presumably, here reprinted, as the edition deffinitive.

The order of the letters is changed to what was probably the actual chronological order of the originals, the second and fourth being interchanged.

Lettres d'amour d'une religieuse portugaise, écrites au chevalier de C. officier français en Portugal. Dernière édition, augmentée de sept lettres avec l'explication, qui n'ont point eu de part dans les impressions précédentes. La Haye, C. de Graaf, 1682.

102 p. 13 cm.

The original letters of the Portuguese nun, now lost, were five in all, written probably in Portuguese, between 1651 and 1668. The French translation appeared for the first time under the title "Lettres portugaises traduites en français." Paris, C. Barbin, 1682. The name of the author was withheld in the older editions and had passed into oblivion, when

In 1810 Bonaventura rediscovered it, written in a copy of the ed. of 1682 by a contemporary hand. The names of the addressee, Marquês de Chamilly, and of the translator, "Villiers," i. e., Lavigne de Thillemont, are mentioned in the preface to the "Lettres d'amour d'une religieuse écrites au chevalier de C. officier français en Portugal." A. Colonge, "Chen Poret de Maréchal, 1802" and in some of the later editions. B. Menier, abbot of St. Leger, in the ed. of the "Lettres portugaises," Paris, 1768, attributed the translation to A. T. P. de Villiers. The publication of the French translation of the letters was followed in the same year by another series of seven letters, written, according to the preface, by "une femme du monde" (cf. Card 1). (cf. Card 1)

This second series was pub. by C. Barbin under the title "Lettres portugaises. Seconde partie" and generally accompanies the first series.

The reprint or second edition of the first series, pub. by C. Barbin in 1682, seven months after the first ed. The title "Lettres d'une religieuse portugaise. Traduction en français. Seconde partie" under the confusion of the assumption that both were by the same writer, and caused the confusion found in later editions.

A series of five letters in response to those of the Portuguese nun, appeared under the title "Réponses aux Lettres portugaises. Traduction en français." in the same year 1682, with a license, dated Feb. 3. They were pub. at Paris by J. B. Leysen, and were written, according to the preface, by the lover of the Portuguese nun, but did not reach their destination. The writer of the preface professes to be ignorant of the names of the author and translator. In the license it is said that the letters were translated by Sieur D. P. D. H.

Alcoforado, Marianna, 1640-1723. Lettres d'amour d'une religieuse portugaise ... 1682. (Card 4)

A different collection of answers consisting of six letters appeared Grenoble, C. Philippes, 1682, under the title "Réponses aux Lettres portugaises." The unknown author of this series declares in his preface that his letters are merely a literary exercise, in purpose similar to Antoin Sabinau's answers to Gilda's Harlequin, cf. Card 1, under Marianna, 2 ed. Lisbon, 1801.

The present ed. is the first to combine the two series, both of the letters and of the answers. The first part is preceded by the preface to the ed. Colonge, P. du Maréchal, 1802, containing the names of the addressee and of the translator. The preface to the "Lettres d'une religieuse portugaise" (p. 1-37) precedes those of the Portuguese nun (p. 41-44). The 2d part has half title "Réponses du chevalier de C." aux Lettres d'une religieuse portugaise. Editions nouvelles. The letters p. 80-181 are preceded by the preface to the answers of the 2d ed.

pub. by J. B. Leysen (1-5, section 16-31, p. 147-162).
